

That was an amusing item from Washington last night —

Senator J. W. Fulbright's Senate Banking Subcommittee turned up the fact that among the borrowers from the RFC was a corporation headed by Guy Gabrielson, national chairman of the Republican party.

The disclosure led another Republican, Senator Capehart of Indiana, to say:

"Those who preach free enterprise should practice it, no matter whether the name is Smith, Jones or Gabrielson."

This is as good a place as any to explain what the RFC uproar is about. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation started off during the great depression as a lender-outer of strained banks and companies of a more or less public nature. It did an emergency job when there was a real financial emergency.

But in these times the RFC's proper job is to go along with private risk capital in developing natural resources, in exploring new industrial processes which will help America's total wealth and employment.

What Senator Bill Fulbright has been objecting to is the RFC's inclination in these good times to take over "sour" loans or "busted" companies whose business can afford to write off its own losses—or, as in the case of Guy Gabrielson's corporation, to put money in a proposition when there wasn't very much private cash at stake.

The facts about Gabrielson seem to be that he had no stock at all in Carthage Hy-Col, Inc., a New York concern organized to build synthetic gasoline plants and pipelines in Texas. Yet he was president of Carthage Hy-Col, Inc., and the firm got RFC loans totaling 18½ million dollars.

Senator Fulbright and everybody else seem to agree that Carthage Hy-Col, Inc., is a first-class financial risk, and the government's money will come back to it. But the oil companies who were the real participants in Hy-Col, Inc., were themselves worth a total of a billion dollars and this particular deal could have been financed entirely by private sources.

The one fact that sticks out like a sore thumb is Gabrielson's serving as president of a corporation which borrowed from RFC although he personally didn't have a dime's worth of stock. That's not good business — either private or public.

Senator Fulbright, himself a man of considerable means, is simply trying to keep the boys honest.

Patmos Youth to Attend Forestry Camp

Burrell Joe Smittle of Rt. 1, Patmos will attend the Arkansas Forestry Camp of Petit Jean State Park, June 26th to July 1st, according to the Camp Director, Leo House, Information and Education assistant of Arkansas Division of Forestry.

Burrell will represent his local (4-H club) at the forestry camp this year, and will have the opportunity of working and studying in the 40 acre Arkansas workshop forest with about seventy other boys from 4-H Clubs and FFA Chapters of Arkansas. House says the boys are qualified to assist in the local forestry programs as junior leaders, helping the forest rangers, school and county leaders with the over-all forestry conservation and fire prevention practices.

This year's forestry camp is the fourth to be held in Arkansas and is sponsored by Crosscut Lumber Company and International Paper Company cooperation with Southern Pulpwood Conservation Association.

Instructors are selected from the forest industries, the Division of Forestry of the Arkansas Resources and Development Commission, Agricultural Extension Service of University of Arkansas and Vocational Agriculture Division of Arkansas State Department of Education.

Chemist Jailed by FBI for Helping Gold

New York, June 16 (AP)—A former U.S. army non-commissioned officer at Albuquerque, N. M., was arrested today by the FBI on a charge of giving atomic secrets to Harry Gold, Philadelphiaian accused of passing atomic secrets to the Russians.

The FBI identified the arrested man as David Greenglass, 28, of New York City.

Greenglass' arrest came less than 24 hours after the seizure in Syracuse, N. Y., of another suspect in the Klaus Fuchs spy ring.

FBI agents said that Greenglass' explanation for his alleged action was that Russia, as an ally during the war, was entitled to the information.

Last night FBI operatives linked Alfred Dean Slack, 44-year-old Syracuse chemist, to the Fuchs spy ring which slipped atomic secrets to the Soviets. They said Slack admitted giving samples of a secret high explosive to Gold, the Philadelphia biochemist.

Gold was named as an intermediate scientist and a Red spy ring seeking atom secrets for Russia.

Greenglass was arrested on a complaint filed before a U. S. commissioner in New Mexico today.

Edward Scheidt, special agent in charge of the FBI's New York office, said the one-time army non-com was picked up here yesterday afternoon.

In explaining his purported contacts with Gold, Scheidt quoted the prisoner as saying:

"I felt it was gross negligence on the part of the United States not to give Russia the information."

Los Angeles Bus Drivers on Strike

Los Angeles, June 16 (AP)—Four thousand operators of buses and streetcars in Los Angeles went on strike early today.

Representatives of the AFL transportation union walked out of eleven-hour negotiations shortly after midnight despite a personal appeal by Mayor Fletcher Bowron for a 15-day truce during the forthcoming national Shrine convention.

Some 200,000 Shriners are expected here next week for the opening of the convention. Several thousand already have arrived. Many of them will begin hoofing their way around the city today. There aren't enough taxicabs to handle the crowds.

Operators began leaving their streetcars and buses as soon as they were called in from the routes.

The union is demanding a 20-cent-an-hour wage increase for its members, most of whom now earn $1.47. The company has disclosed no counter offer.

The Los Angeles transit lines ordinarily carry a million riders daily. During the Shrine convention, the load would have been much greater.

Violence Claims Four in State on Thursday

By The Associated Press
Four persons died violently in Arkansas Thursday.

Claude Erwin, Jr., 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Erwin of Star City, was kicked to death by a mule while he was playing in a pasture near his home. His parents, four sisters and a brother survive.

Francis Moore, 37, of Sherrill (Jefferson county) died of injuries suffered when his parked truck was struck by an automobile near Minturn (Lawrence county). Moore was headed for Kennett, Mo., with his wife and four children and had stopped to repair his truck when the accident occurred. The others were not injured.

Earlier Thursday Fred Manasco, manager of Vets Haven at Lake Catherine, and Mrs. Albert Miller, wife of a caretaker, drowned when their boat overturned in the lake.

New Amerasia Investigation Is Demanded

Washington, June 16 (AP)—Senator McCarthy (R-Wis.) today challenged a senate investigators to make public the secret testimony they have received from Emanuel S. Larsen of the Amerasia case.

McCarthy told reporters that he would show "who is telling the truth" in the dispute between him and Deputy Under Secretary of State John E. Purifoy. Each has accused the other in effect of trying to influence Larsen's testimony.

In a speech last night, McCarthy said Purifoy had promised free legal advice and loyalty clearance to Larsen, who was a defendant in the 1945 Amerasia stolen documents case, in return for favorable testimony on Capitol Hill.

Purifoy and Larsen immediately issued denials of McCarthy's charge.

Purifoy said that furthermore he was informed that McCarthy had hinted he would go easy on Larsen "if he were to testify x x x in a way satisfactory to Senator McCarthy." Purifoy said his information came from Larsen himself.

Larsen's testimony was taken behind closed doors last May 29 by a senate foreign relations subcommittee. The group is looking into McCarthy's charges that the state department is a haven for Communists and Red sympathizers.

McCarthy is not a member of the inquiry committee, but he said in his speech that he had found out what Larsen told the group. McCarthy told reporters today:

"This time we can very easily find out who is telling the truth by making the text of Larsen's testimony public."

"They (the committee) never thought it was going to come out. This is one time when there shouldn't be any question as to who is telling the truth."

"They've got the testimony and I invite them to make it public."

Senator Tydings (D-Md.), the committee chairman, has steadfastly refused to make public most of the Amerasia inquiry testimony.

GOP Against Cut Without New Taxes

Washington, June 16 (AP)—Democratic leaders revived hope today for senate action on excise tax cuts but Republican opposition cropped up against proposed increases in corporation levies.

Senator Lucas of Illinois, the Democratic leader, told a reporter that if the house passes a bill on which its ways and means committee is reported near final agreement, he will ask for senate action on it.

The house group is said to be ready to act on a bill which would lop an estimated $1,100,000,000 off levies on such things as furs, jewelry, luggage, movie admissions and travel tickets.

To make up in part for this, the ways and means members have lately been talking about a boost in corporation taxes which would net about $500,000,000. Closing of loopholes might narrow the gap in revenue loss. President Truman has plainly indicated a veto if there is any substantial revenue loss.

Lucas said that from what he knows of the situation he thinks corporations can well afford to take an increase in taxes.

"They have the biggest profits in history," he said. "There is no reason why they can't pay more taxes."

However, Senator Millikin (R-Colo.), top GOP member of the tax handling senate finance committee, said he will oppose any increase in taxes except those which would close loopholes in the present law.

"It is the wrong time to be increasing any taxes," Millikin told a reporter. "Instead, we should take every possible hurdle off business and attain the strongest kind of economy to bear the heavy load of defense and foreign aid expenditures."

Catholic Bible School Next Week

The Catholic Religious vacation school will be conducted through the week of June 19 at Our Lady of Good Hope Catholic church. Classes will be held each morning from 9 o'clock until 12 noon. All Catholic school children are expected to attend these instructions.

The vacation school will be conducted by John Albert Janesco and Ruben Groff, senior Theological students at Saint John's Home Mission Seminary, Little Rock.

The courses will include: Instruction in Christian Doctrine; preparation for First Communion and Bible history.

St. Louis Shows Huge Increase in Population

St. Louis, June 16 (AP)—Greater St. Louis — the metropolitan area including four counties as well as the city — has gained 261,181 residents during the past ten years, a tabulation of preliminary census reports shows.

The tabulation shows a total population of 1,629,158 for the city, St. Louis and St. Charles counties, Mo., and St. Clair and Madison counties, Ill. The figures are subject to revision.

The annual Farmers Home Demonstration tour of progressive "farmsteads" under FHA supervision was conducted from 9 to 11:30 a.m. today under the supervision of W. M. Sparks, Hempstead FHA director.

Approximately 60 persons made the tour including representatives from various business organizations, agricultural agencies, Chamber of Commerce, Veterans Administration and the state department of agriculture, Little Rock.

The first stop was at the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Avery, DeAnn and the second at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jock Allen, Emmet Rt. 2.

Purpose of the tour was to familiarize business groups with some of the farm programs and practices of the F. H. A. At the Avery farm the group studied landscaping and interior arrangement of a modern rural home.

Well-planned and well-developed pasture and livestock programs were studied at the Allen home.

Mr. and Mrs. Avery built their 7-room home with the help of one carpenter. They have excellent plans for developing beauty of the premises.

The Allens boast a record of never having to buy feed for their livestock which includes a large number of cattle and hogs. Crop rotation on the 25 acre pasture makes this possible.

Both families obtain most of their year around food supply from their productive gardens.

Represented on the tour were: Mrs. Lorraine Blackwood, home demonstration agent, C. Stuart, Jr., John Atkins, and Aubrey Enoch, instructors for the veterans administration, Cecil Guthrie, administrative officer for PMA, C. A. Armistage, director of Hope C. of C. Frank Hill, real estate representative, Jess Davis, Hope Star, chairman of the Arkansas Balanced Farming Contest for Hempstead, ToyTollett, Tol-E-Tex representative, Mrs. Mamie Van Epps and B. D. Faught, F. H. A. Little Rock.

Basing Point Bill Vetted by Truman

Washington, June 15 (AP)—President Truman today vetoed the basing point bill—a measure that would have guaranteed individual businessmen the right to absorb freight charges and sell their products at uniform delivered prices.

In a message to the senate, Mr. Truman said he was convinced the bill would "obscure, rather than clarify," existing laws relating to pricing practices.

It was the second controversial measure vetoed by the President in recent months. Both the disputed bills widely split Democratic ranks. The first was the Kerr Natural Gas bill which would have freed independent gas producers from federal regulation.

The basing point bill was intended to define the application of the federal trade commission act and the Clayton anti-trust act to certain pricing practices.

The legislation would have permitted sellers to discriminate in prices to customers to meet competition in "good faith," and in the absence of conspiracy, collusion or fraudulent practice.

Record mutual payoff in Hialeah's 25-year-history occurred this winter with Robber returning $325.00 for each $2 win ticket.

Door Open to 136,000 Homeless

Washington, June 16 (AP)—President Truman today signed legislation opening America's doors to an additional 136,000 displaced persons.

The measure revises a 1948 law, expiring June 30, that authorized the entry of 205,000 DPs—persons driven from their homes by two wars. It extends the program for another year and increases the number eligible for admission to 341,000.

Upwards of 153,000 displaced persons have already come to the United States to make their homes.

In addition to increasing the total of displaced persons who could become U. S. residents under the program, the new law also provides for the admission of:

(1) 5,000 war orphans from their homes in Czechoslovakia, Poland, Romania and other eastern European countries after the Potsdam agreement of 1945.

(2) Up to 15,000 refugees who entered the United States prior to April 30, 1949 on temporary basis. To remain here, they must make application to the attorney general and get consent from him and congress.

Everybody Has a Secret Life — So Men Take a Tip, Let the Wife Open the Garage Door

BY HAL BOYLE

New York, June 16 (AP)—Everybody has a secret life.

Or certainly everyone tries to. Some facet of his career, past or present . . . some yawning longing . . . Some shameful deed of good will . . . Some odd attitude toward the world . . . a person lives to hold to his heart and apart from those who know him best.

The funny thing about it all is that often he will blurt out to a stranger this secret he'd lie about rather than reveal to a lifelong acquaintance.

I spend a great part of my life meeting strangers. And they tell me the damndest things sometimes.

Cynics say the greatest secrets in America are locked in safe deposit vaults — or buried under concrete in the basement or under dirt in the backyard, twelve paces north northeast of the old elm tree.

However, I felt that most of these secrets — dollars hidden from the income tax collector—have been dug up since the end of the war and invested or spent.

The real depositories of secrets in our times are the ears of priests, the dossiers of lawyers, the health verdicts of doctors — and the memories of newspaper reporters.

When I was a student in the University of Missouri school of journalism, I took a course in interviewing. I was taught that I should avoid bringing out pencil and paper because that might cause the subject of the interview to "freeze up."

I took me about ten years of reporting to learn that this theory was completely wrong — at least for me. I found that the quickest way I could get the confidence of someone I was interviewing was to haul out the old notebook and scribble down his words, just as he said them.

There is a passion for accuracy in the heart of every man, be he a general of the army, a justice of the peace or a pullman porter. He wants what he says put down the way he said. When you pull out that pencil, it doesn't frighten him. It gives him a sense of dignity. He feels that makes him a part

The second conviction of Herman Maxwell, 21-year-old Hope Negro scheduled to die for rape of a white DeAnn farm wife, was appealed to the supreme court today for the second time.

Again Maxwell is represented by Harold Flowers, Pine Bluff Negro attorney who unsuccessfully defended him in a second trial.

Maxwell's first conviction was carried to the high court which ordered a new trial on the ground that his court-appointed attorneys did not have enough time to prepare a proper defense.

The second trial was heard in the April session of court and he was again convicted to die on June 28.

Rebel Leaders Arrested Peru Insists

Arequipa, Peru, June 16 (AP)—Isolated snipers continued to fire sporadically from rooftops today but Peru's government appeared to have broken the back of a short bloody revolt.

Government troops were restoring order slowly and in general the situation approached normal. Though the government claimed to have complete control of the situation, the army remained on the alert throughout Peru.

Authorities announced the lifting of censorship, and communications with the rest of the country were restored.

Francisco J. Mostajo, named by the government as the leader of the revolt estimated to have resulted in 50 deaths and the wounding of 150 since Wednesday, was released by the army.

Gen. Ernesto Montive, earlier reported arrested, was said to be in Lima. His status was unclear. Most other rebels had been released, though a few remained in custody.

(An army broadcast from Arequipa, also heard in La Paz, said all rebels — including the leaders — would be freed and no reprisals would be made.)

Nearly all the city's businesses were closed by a general strike. Faving black barricades, thrown up during the fighting, still made many streets impassable.

Censorship, imposed for a time yesterday, was reimposed last night. (The army-controlled radio station at Arequipa indicated that fighting still might be threatening or continuing. Broadcasts heard in La Paz said, "if the rebels insist on fighting, the army will pursue."

Joint Economic Group Demands Spending Curb

Washington, June 16 (AP)—Warning that there are dangers of inflation, the senate-house economic committee has raised a demand for "relentless" cuts in the government's "inherited spending."

The committee issued a report yesterday signed by its eight Democrats, while the six Republicans on the group presented a separate finding of their own.

Even the Democrats failed to endorse President Truman's plea for a net increase in taxes. They did ask for some excise tax cuts and said also:

"In years of such booming business as currently is causing prices to roll up in an inflationary manner throughout the economy, this government should not be incurring deficits."

Mr. Truman asked last January for cuts in excise taxes, to be balanced by additional revenue from other sources — plus an additional billion dollars, mainly from higher corporation taxes, to help trim the federal deficit.

The congressional committee's report dealt with the President's annual economic message, which he also delivered to congress in January.

Except possibly to boost the morale of the congressional economy bloc, the committee's report was expected to have little effect on legislation for these reasons:

1. For the third straight year, the advisers of congress on economic matters divided on strictly political lines.

2. The report was 3 1/2 months late. It was due on March 15. At this time it cannot sway many votes.

Pacific Haze May Be Dust From Calif.

Honolulu, June 16 (AP)—A great Pacific haze may have come from the southern California desert.

The U. S. weather bureau popped up with this new story just as meteorologists here had predicted the haze on Maui.

Chief Meteorologist Volcano, said the haze was a dust storm from the Simpson of Honolulu's weather bureau said yesterday the Washington report indicated the smoke pall contained sand from southern California's desert.

There was a sharp wind in southern California, June 15, Simpson said, and computing his Washington colleagues pointed to the possibility that winds carried the sand out over the Pacific.

The haze hung over more than 1,000,000 square miles — from Wake Island eastward past Hawaii — for three days and nights.

It began breaking up over Hawaii yesterday when a northeast wind ruffled an almost dead calm.

Elusive Escape Artist Is Recaptured

Munich, Germany, June 16 (AP)—Police caught Horner Gombert today under the bed in his German girl friend's apartment, three days after the ex-soldier's third escape from a U. S. army jail.

"I broke out of jail to see my girl," the hunky expatriate from Muskogee, Okla., told his captors as he meekly surrendered.

Two American military policemen and a German cop seized the 26-year-old Cook in Munich after receiving a telephone tip: "You don't have to use your pistols on me, boys," the man said.

His German girl, Anna Sporn, was absent from the apartment. Cook was seized. His German girl had started when he fled from Germany illegally, after a conduct discharge from the army to see her.

"I want to marry her," he said after his first arrest.

"I missed her again," he muttered today as his captors took away this morning from the apartment of her aunt.

Cook escaped from the Dachau army stockade Tuesday while a guard was looking for his rifle. There he had eluded 8,000 German police and about 300 armed American MPs.

Arkansas Has Important Senate Job

Washington, June 15 — (AP) — Charles L. Watkins is a thin, mild man who holds a job in which he is supposed to have the impartiality of Solomon.

He must be doing all right because he has held his job a long time in a place where tempers are short and suspicion sharp.

Watkins, who is 70, is the senate parliamentarian. In fact, he's the only full time parliamentarian the senate ever has had.

In this job he's supposed to walk down the middle, looking neither at the Democrats nor Republicans, while unscrupulously the senators from their own red tape, of which there is plenty.

Until 1933, the senate had 44 rules. In that year, in what must have been an economy wave, the senate reduced its rules from 44 to 40.

It still has the same 40 and it does its business according to those rules.

Any time a senator acts contrary to what another senator thinks one of the 40 rules means, his hand is called.

And, since Democrats and Republicans are always pulling the rule book on one another, there's work for Watkins.

In short, he's supposed to help straighten them out on what the rules mean. At this point, maybe you're thinking:

"Well, if there are only 40 rules, don't all the senators know them all by heart? Why do they need Watkins?"

In the first place, the 40 rules cover about 50 pages in a booklet called the "Senate Manual."

It's safe to say no senator knows the 40 rules by heart. Not even Watkins, who knows them inside out, can recite them word for word.

Further, there's a little thing, but a very important one called "precedent," which concerns what previous senates did about a certain rule.

Although all 40 rules have remained in force, down through the years the various senates have modified most of them by deciding if a rule really meant this or really meant that.

So, when the present senate gets into a dispute about a rule, if it knows the precedent of that rule, it can follow them. Or it can shoot off in any direction, setting a new precedent.

Maybe you're saying: "But can't the senators look up a copy of the rules beside them, plus a copy of the precedents?"

The trouble is: Those precedents have been gathered together, except in Watkins' head, and own typewritten notes.

They have gone back to 1863 in the Congressional Record, the daily journal of the senate's doings — and read every page every day the senate has been in session since that time.

He had to do it, not why because every dispute about a rule was buried between tons of oratory, copies of bills, and the other stuff that gets printed daily in the Congressional Record.

Watkins took full notes on every dispute and now has 10 fat volumes of them in his office. Even so, his records go only from 1893 to 1932.

He hopes to bring the precedents up to date.

Then, he expects the senate will have this whole history of precedents printed by the government printer for the use of future senates.

Watkins, born in Arkansas, got his first senate job as a clerk on June 15, 1915. At that time the assistant secretary of the senate was doubling as parliamentarian. For eight years Watkins sat beside him, listening to him discourse on rules.

Then in 1923 when this man became sick, Watkins was made parliamentarian. In 1935 he was promoted to "official" parliamentarian, the first time that had happened. His assistant is Edward Hickey, who may succeed him some day.

With the house parliamentarian is Lewis Decker. He's had that job since 1929. Being a much younger man than Watkins, he may wind up having been a parliamentarian longer.

Reds Rule Iowa Town for a Time

Martley, Iowa, June 15 (AP) — Residents of this northern Iowa town lived under a mock Communist rule for more than five hours yesterday as a flag day observance designed to show that "it can happen here."

Some of the town's 1,600 persons were tried by ration cards, burning of books and a "guerrilla" invasion. Actually, the ration cards were only a formality and not required and only worn out books were burned.

But as one official put it: "They know communism is bad, they feel that when you play along something that is bad, somebody's going to get hurt."

All seemed happier when the town returned to its conventional flag day program for last night's observance.

James F. Green of the American Legion, chairman of the town's flag day committee, said the day's program was "very easily carried out."

Communism can be defeated, he said. "We must know the facts."

SHARER CAMPAIGN

By Edwin Rutt
Copyright 1950 by NEA Service, Inc.

THE STORY: Bill Jarvis, spending a week at a vacation resort as a guest of the parents of his niece Bev Coulter, is engaged in a campaign of multiple group directed against Hilda Sands, a pretty middle-aged woman who is in the room. During a stroll while she is playing bridge with others, he meets Hilda on the golf course, Hilda tells him she is trying to decide to go home.

IV

HILDA SANDS narrowed her eyes suddenly. "Somebody, it seems, would like to force me out of here—for a reason I can't imagine. Well, she's going to be fooled. I'd like to leave. I'd like never to see this place again, but darned if I'll be driven out." Her chin jutted sharply.

"But if you're unhappy?" Bill felt himself relaxing.

"That's not the point. I'm just not letting a lot of cats and scoundrel mongers lick me. And beyond that—" her voice quivered—"when Dad struck trouble he faced up to it and took—the rap!"

"For somebody else?"

She shot him a peculiar glance. "You know, then?"

"I don't know anything. I've heard this rumor. But now I've met you, it makes even less sense than when I first heard it."

Hilda's eyes dropped. "Thanks—Bill. That's one of the sweetest things that's ever been said to me. But I won't pull any punches. My father really did go to prison."

"So what? It was a frame of some kind, wasn't it?"

"Definitely. Some day, if you're interested, I may tell you the whole thing. Not now. Everybody knows it was a frame, though, out in Rexford, Ill., where I live. And it happened three years ago and I was managing to forget it. Until—a suggestion of teeth cut into the vague dark line of her eye—"somebody here raked it up and put the nastiest kind of construction on it."

"I don't get this," Bill said, almost angrily. "Why can't these people accept the true facts and be decent to you?"

She hesitated. "Aren't you staying away from Bev—your friends—a pretty long time?"

"They're bridging. I'll never be missed."

"Well then, I teach physical training in Rexford. But last spring I had a breakdown. That sounds silly. The P. T. teacher letting herself break down. Anyhow, I did. And I'd heard about a well place to build up in during the summer. It's wildly expensive, of course, but I decided to blow myself. So I came and it was the place for me, physically. But in no other way, I guess."

"I'm sorry," Bill said slowly, "that I can't do more than just listen."

"You've been kind," Hilda's head inclined toward him and the faint sweet scent of her hair. "I'm thinking that Beverly Coulter has got herself a very nice guy."

She was close, too close. And there was too much moonlight; too many soft insidious whispers in the night. Bill knew that it was foolish, dangerous even. But involuntarily his hand went out, toward the shadowy outline of her waist.

Went out, then stopped—wavered slightly.

From somewhere in the path behind them a twig or small fallen branch cracked sharply—as if beneath the pressure of a foot.

Hilda took a quick backward step. "What was that?"

"I don't know," Bill listened, but no further sounds came. "Just some animal, I guess."

DOROTHY DIX

Prospective Stepfather

Dear Dot Dix: I am in love with a widow who has two girls one 12 and the other 15. They are under very poor control and do just as they please. I just simply can't stand the way they act, though I don't say anything. But if I married their mother I would have to change from that and I am afraid that it would cause her and me to get along badly. I feel I can't give the mother up, but I can't endure the kids. Please give me your advice.

M. R. H. A.

Answer: You certainly have a prophetic soul when it warns you that you will have trouble with the mother the minute you begin to try to control her undisciplined children.

Don't deceive yourself into thinking that if you marry this woman with her half grown girls she will side with you and hold up your hands when you try to discipline them. She won't. She will go over to the enemy's camp every time and align herself with the children. In practically every family it is mother and the girls against father, even when it is their own father, and what happens to a stepfather when he faces that consolidated opposition is too horrible to think of.

Being a stepfather is the toughest job that any man ever tackles. It is really harder for a man to be a good stepfather than it is for a woman to be a good stepmother because most women have some maternal instinct that makes them fond of children and gives them some intuitive knowledge of them but few men are endowed by Nature with much paternal instinct. That is something that has to be developed in them by their own children. Children are an acquired taste with men so to speak.

Hence no man should marry a woman with children unless he feels within himself a call to be a father to them, unless he is determined within himself to use tact and diplomacy and kindness in dealing with the children whose lives he has taken into his hands.

So, M. R. Man think a long time before you marry this woman whose children you already dislike. You'll hate them worse when they devil the life out of you and your wife will quarrel continually over them. But remember, if you do assume the role of stepfather to them, that you will make or mar their lives.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am a business woman of 38. A man who is seven years younger than I am and who was the husband of my sister, who died several years ago, wants to marry me. We were always very good friends and our grief over her loss has drawn us very close together. What do you think we should do under the circumstances? Marry, or give each other up? Is the fact that this man was my sister's husband a bar to our union. And what about the differences?

A CONSTANT READER

ant still, we must know what we believe in and be devoted to it."

During the day all traces of democratic activity had been wiped out as nearly as possible.

Town officials, civic leaders, a weekly newspaper editor, clergymen and school teachers were thrown into an improvised stockade by "troops and guerrillas" wearing paper "Soviet" arm-bands.

Answer: There is no reason in the world why you shouldn't marry and be happy. In fact, I should say that your marriage stands a better chance for happiness than most because you and the man know each other so thoroughly that you should be able to judge of your congeniality and suitability to each other.

Of course, in the past there has been a prejudice against a man marrying his deceased wife's sister, but we have happily outgrown that now. For common sense has shown us that in thousands of cases there was no other woman in the world who was so ideal a mate for a bereaved widower as his wife's sister. She was more likely to have the characteristics that he had loved in his wife than any other woman she would know his habits and his ways could fit into his life almost without a ripple. There would be no need of adjusting himself to her as to a strange woman.

As for the difference in age, seven years means nothing after a man is past 30, and especially after he has gone through the sobering grief of widowhood.

Dear Miss Dix: My husband and I have adopted a baby girl. She is so very bright and happy and precious to us, but she is an illegitimate baby and our problem is what to tell her when she grows up. Of course, we can satisfy her with most any explanation while she is small, but we realize we must tell her one story and stick to it. Would you destroy the paper concerning her parents, or tell her the whole truth?

MRS. C. P. W.

Answer: Tell her she is an adopted child while she is too little to understand enough about it to have any curiosity on the subject, but don't tell her that she is illegitimate until it becomes necessary to do so.

If she asks any questions about her parents just tell her that they were situated so that they couldn't take care of her and that she was given to you, and that some day when she is a grown-up girl you will tell her all about it. Possibly she will never have to know the sad truth about her birth.

Dear Miss Dix: We have a son who will be 17 next month. He goes with a girl who is also going to have a birthday during that month. The girl started a campaign for a diamond ring after Christmas and my son insists he is going to get her one, which is absurd, considering that we are in very moderate circumstances. What can be done when Son threatens to join the navy, quit school or do something equally ridiculous when he is denied anything he wants?

How can we impress upon him the necessity of his pursuit, his high school course without buying this girl whatever she demands? She already has his watch as well as numerous articles of less value.

mony, all of which has been taken in closed meetings.

Tydings has said that to release it piecemeal would distort the overall picture. His position has been that the testimony would be made public when the inquiry has been completed.

The new furor over the Amerasia case erupted following a New York grand jury's finding, yesterday that the espionage department had properly handled prosecution of the case five years ago. The case involved the illegal removal of hundreds of secret government documents which federal agents found in raids on the offices of Amerasia magazine in New York. The magazine, which dealt with Far Eastern affairs, went out of business a short time later.

The grand jury's action led some Democrats to express hope that the senate committee investigating McCarthy's communism in government charges might be able to wind up its Amerasia probe in short order.

However, many Republicans made clear that the grand jury's action didn't entirely satisfy them. They were expected to point to McCarthy's latest charge as the clincher.

The Wisconsin senator spoke last night before the National Editorial Association at Groton, Conn. He said Larsen had arranged a "payoff" deal with Peurifoy preparatory to appearing before the senate investigators in closed session last week, McCarthy quoted.

"You needn't worry, John. I won't testify against John Service."

Service and Larsen were among six persons originally arrested in the Amerasia case. At that time, both were employed by the state department. Service, now a department consular official, was never indicted. Larsen was fined $500 after he pleaded "no contest." He no longer is a department employee.

Syracuse, N. Y., June 16 — (AP) — Alfred Dean Slack, 44-year-old Syracuse chemist, stood accused today of conspiring to supply Russia with the same things that she does.

Dear Miss Dix: It has been said that every woman is some man's rib.

Do you believe that for every man there is a special woman who was meant to be that man's mate?

Answer: Probably, but if so few men find them. The tragedy of the world is the mismatched, the good men and women who guessed wrong about their ribs and would be such good husbands and wives to the right mates and are such poor husbands and wives to the wrong ones.

Don't Pay For Ring

Of course, you cannot do anything with the girl except indirectly to block her game, but you can certainly stop the boy's giving her a diamond ring by refusing to pay for it. It takes money to buy jewelry, and if you absolutely refuse to supply it you automatically save your boy from his folly, for no merchant will be silly enough to sell a schoolboy without a job a diamond ring if he knows that his parents will not pay for it.

Have a heart, but also have a backbone in dealing with him, and don't be moved by his raving nor by his threat of the direful thing he is going to do. He won't do them and, oh, how grateful he will be to you for teaching him early in life how little worth the price are bought kisses and the affection that has to be continually stimulated with gifts.

And if by refusing to give your son the money to buy a ring for his grasping sweetheart you can make her throw him over for some boy who is better off you will have done him a favor that he can never repay.

Dear Miss Dix: My husband and I have been married nine years and have one child. I was a very pretty girl and he was much in love with me when we were married, and we were very happy for the first year. I am a good cook and housekeeper and very affectionate, but our trouble is that I have very little education. Don't like to read, while my husband is a brilliant man, has a college degree and a wonderful position. Now he is tired of me, never speaks to me except to tell me how dumb I am. He has no affection for me for the physical attraction is gone. Tell me to marry in their own class and not break some poor girl's heart by marrying her and then being ashamed of her.

A WOMAN WHO KNOWS

Answer: When we speak of a man who has outgrown his wife our sympathy is always for the man who has lost touch with his wife because he has gone forward while she has stayed put. But if we have tears to shed, the one whom we should bedew with them is the out grown wife, the woman who has lost the little upon her husband that her physical appeal once gave her, the woman who knows that her husband is tired of her and ashamed of her, not because of anything that she has done, but because she is just as God made her and as she was at the time that he picked her out for a wife.

The man who marries a girl who is his intellectual inferior just because he is temporarily caught by her pretty face does her a greater wrong than he does himself. He ruins her life more completely than he does his own. For the time comes when her face loses its prettiness and her youth is gone and he turns to women of his own class for companionship, then none so poor and none to be so pitied as the lonely, dumb wife who could have been so happy married to some man on her own intellectual level, who would have

Harriman to Be Assistant to Truman

Washington, June 16 — (AP) — President Truman today appointed Ambassador W. Averell Harriman to a new job as special assistant to the President. His duties will be to help the President carry out the nation's broad international responsibilities.

Harriman is now United States special representative in Europe for the economic cooperation administration, with the rank of ambassador.

To succeed him in that post the President nominated Milton Katz, of Massachusetts, now Harriman's assistant in Europe.

He, too, will have the rank of ambassador.

The White House said in a statement: "The implementation of the decisions reached at the recent London meetings, and the integration of the various interests of the departments and agencies concerned with the development of government-wide policies related to our international responsibilities, require a large measure of presidential consideration and decision."

"The President believes that Mr. Harriman's long experience in international affairs will be of great value in helping him deal with these matters. Mr. Harriman will assume his new duties early in August."

Steaming Sun Beats Down on Arkansas

Little Rock, June 16 — (AP) — A steaming sun beat down on most of Arkansas again today and the U. S. weather bureau here predicted temperatures to stay in the middle-nineties.

At Wilson, in Mississippi county, resident sweltered through a blazing 97-degree day yesterday — the state high for 1950.

Stuttgart and Brinkley recorded 95 degrees; Hot Springs and Fort Smith 94 degrees. Under 84-degree weather and temperatures generally was in the low 90's across the state.

Today's official forecast gave no indication of relief at least until Saturday. Fair skies were predicted with very little change in temperature. Saturday.

Slack, a native of Syracuse who claims he is "violently" opposed to communism, was arrested last night by FBI agents on a charge of espionage. He was jailed at nearby Utica on $10,000 bail, pending transfer to Knoxville, Tenn.

The $75-a-week paint firm chemist worked in the wartime years of 1943-44 at Kingsport, Tenn., where the explosive RDX was manufactured and later on the Manhattan atomic project at Lake Ridge, Tenn.

The FBI said the bespectacled father of two boys had admitted giving samples and production secrets to Harry Gold, Philadelphia chemist awaiting trial on an espionage charge. Gold is alleged to have passed them to his Soviet principal, Semen M. Semenov.

Slack roundly declared he was innocent when interviewed by reporters. Asked whether he knew Harry Gold, he replied: "I don't recall ever knowing anybody by that name."

No plea was permitted at his arraignment before U. S. Commissioner A. Van W. Hancock. He will enter his plea at Knoxville, where the case will be presented to a federal grand jury.

Conviction on a charge of espionage in wartime carries a possible penalty of death.

A salesman for the Sundure Paint Corp., where Slack has been assistant superintendent for several months, pictured Slack as a "quiet, conscientious worker" and said his "ideas seemed decidedly democratic." The salesman declined use of his name.

The company's treasurer, Philip A. Suskind, described Slack as "very capable, never a troublemaker" and a church-goer.

"He has a very charming wife and two nice children," Suskind said.

Mrs. Slack turned reporters away from her home in Clay, miles north of Syracuse.

(Loudspeakers were being used in the city for appeals to the rebels to lay down their arms, another broadcast said.)

The government said of its force of troops and police, eight had been killed and 63 wounded. Unofficial estimates of the total dead ranged from 40 to 200.

The government blamed the revolt on a political organization called "Accion Civica" (civic action). Communists, members of the outlawed leftist Apra party and members of the "Democratic league."

Today's official forecast gave no indication of relief at least until Saturday. Fair skies were predicted with very little change in temperature. Saturday.

Methodists in North Arkansas Open Conference

North Little Rock, June 16 (P)—The North Arkansas conference of the Methodist church yesterday left the way open to bring up again the possibility of consolidation with the Little Rock conference.

The conference voted without dissent to table the proposal for consolidation—a move which means the matter may be brought up again at any time.

The Little Rock conference at Hot Springs last week rejected the proposed unification. Presumably, however, that conference could vote later to reinstate the matter if it wished.

Four veteran ministers of the north Arkansas conference, who are being retired, were honored at yesterday afternoon's session. The four are the Rev. W. W. Albright, Bald Knob who served 44 years; the Rev. Sam Yancy, Fayetteville, 39 years; the Rev. John Womack, Marked Tree, 48 years, and the Rev. Jefferson Sherman, Jonesboro, 45 years.

Anti Cold Drug Firms to Halt False Advertising

Washington, June 16 (P)—The government announced today that five big makers of anti-cold drugs have agreed to stop using allegedly "false and misleading" advertising to promote the sale of the products.

The federal trade commission said the action results from FTC complaints charging the firms with violation of federal fair trade laws. The five are Bristol-Myers Co., Anahist Co. Inc., and Whitehall Pharmaceutical Co., all of New York; Pharmacia Chemical Co. Inc., Montclair, N. J.; and the Grove Laboratories Inc., St. Louis, Mo.

FTC's announcement said the companies have agreed to "discontinue representations concerning the effectiveness of their anti-cold preparations in the treatment of common colds."

The products involved are sold under the trade names of Resistab, Anahist, Kriptin, Inhibitor and Antamine.

The government agency—which serves as watchdog of the trade and advertising practices of business—started proceedings against anti-cold drugs on March 21.

European Recovery Aid Opens New Era for Colonies But Not One of Exploitation

By CLARKE BEACH
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst
(For DeWitt MacKenzie)

When the European recovery program was launched, many a student of history feared it would open a new era of colonial exploitation.

European leaders had proclaimed that Europe must develop its colonies and possessions as an essential aid to Europe's recovery. The questions asked were: Would they simply drain off the natural riches of the colonies, leaving the natives only with their wages and depleted resources?

Or would they plow a good share of the profits back into the business, enabling the natives themselves to benefit permanently, to raise their standards of living, to develop their own independent economies?

Some U. S. officials are reassured after having had an opportunity to observe how ECA funds have been spent in the colonies and to study development programs that the European countries have conducted with their own funds.

They say there is no doubt that the countries of Europe are showing determination to share the profits of colonial enterprises with the people in the colonies.

About $300,000,000 of ECA funds has been spent in colonial dependencies. In addition, $100,000,000 in counterpart funds has been invested there. One ECA official who works in this field says that a large share of this money is going into projects which will be of permanent benefit to the communities involved.

Norris E. Dodd, director general of the United Nations food and agriculture organization, said after a recent trip through Africa and other colonial areas that "the need for educating local populations and raising their standards of living as a fundamental requirement of progress" has become a major preoccupation of the governments concerned.

"Policy makers," he added "are apparently realizing more and more that, concurrently with agricultural world development they are responsible for the welfare and education of local populations."

In all the countries he visited, he said, there were programs to promote health, education, rural welfare, credit, transportation, marketing and distribution. Various forms of vocational training were provided. And in all countries the natives were being taught how to grow more food, through demonstrations of modern farming methods.

All this is in sharp contrast to the old colonial system, under which foreign owners simply set up their rubber plantations, their tin, copper or bauxite mines and left the natives with nothing but their meager wages. Even in the most prosperous years the natives made no progress as individuals.

In years when rubber, tin, copper or bauxite were not in demand in world markets, they were known out of work. Then no individual farms or native economy were available to relieve their poverty.

Typical of the new era are some of the current British projects in Africa. Two of them resemble TVA on a small scale—at Owen Falls, in East Africa, and on the Volta river, in Guinea. There dams are

Special Insurance Dividends Mailed to Beneficiaries

Kansas City, June 16 (P)—Special national life insurance dividends, amounting to approximately $2,250,000, have been mailed to beneficiaries in Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas and Oklahoma, the Veterans administration announced today.

The VA's regional office here said the dividends had been mailed to more than 37,000 beneficiaries in the four-state area. About 4,500 more payments are being processed of which about 2,000 involve incorrect address and points of a legal nature. An additional 1,500, the VA said, will require adjudication because more than one policy was issued.

These are payments in which the serviceman policy holder died before January 1, 1948.

The largest portion of the total amount was paid to Missourians, $1,075,000, Oklahomans received $635,000; Kansans $420,000 and those in Arkansas $370,000.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler Copyright, 1950

By King Features Syndicate.

New York, June 14 — In consideration of a great mileage of publicity from me to him and his and their cause, I have given, I trust that Josef Stalin will delay the loud or shouting phase of World War Three, otherwise to be known as the Roosevelt Memorial war, until I have had time to catch up on my reading about the second one. I have been diligent and have stepped up my lenses several powers but still find myself losing ground as the memoirs and the more or less belated letters of the backstairs come rippling off the press. This is duty-reading. It is a smelting and refining process because in no other phase of history has the reader had to plod through so much deception to get so little and if you don't like my metaphors you know, where you can go on Google for this.

As a matter of fact, I have appointed myself a sort of historical fly-cop to placard lies and distortions one way or another, such as the sly attempt of La Boca to leave it for history that Herbert Hoover got scared, hid behind the lace curtains and bugled out the army behind the chief of staff to massacre the veterans in the bloodless liquidation of the bonus riots. The most fruitful book that I have read so far has been strange as you may deem it, Elliott's master work entitled "As He Saw It", although the text leaves me confused as to whether "he" was Elliott or him who has passed to a reward which can be paid partly for a soul so vastly good. Next to his I would rate his mother's magnificent compilation of tributes to herself and artful missions of truth, and just about next I find Merriman Smith's "Thank You, Mr. President", Kay Summerby's "Eisenhower Was My Boss", Jim Byrnes' "Frankly Speaking" or vice versa, and Arthur Bliss Lane's, "I Saw Poland Betrayed". They are in a photo-finish, but there are so many more so very good that I must beg for time.

Marshall Stalin should be willing to grant me this. What is his hurry, if any? The longer he waits the worse our economic debility grows and the time comes when debility passes into prostration. Thereupon the Marshal wouldn't have to fight us at all. Put otherwise, that is to say, as one of our perambulating constellations of the air force did, the Russians would be awful fools to bomb our national capital and must be shrewd enough to know it.

Lloyd George kept me entertained and expectant year after year from the beginning of his quiet, meaty memoirs on his little practice war with his passchendaelles and Vimys, his Kitchener and Caporetto, until deep into 1936. It was reported that he had found precedent in the case of President Grant for a belief that documents passing across his desk were his to publish and construe for his own moral, political and, if need be, financial profit. He was a leisurely hack and the books sold well until he petered out.

I recall how empty the satisfaction was of meeting him in Simpson's not long before he died, weakened, vain and tossing his frosty plume for attention but reaping an apathy that was shocking to me. I remember him of old as one of the mighty men of the earth and as hard to see as Stalin is today. Floyd Gibbons saw him coming and I thought his gall exceeded even American standards of impudence as he hopped out of his chair, pumped the old guy's arm and boomed "Mr. Prime Minister, this is indeed a pleasure" and introduced us all. That nerve is one of the great virtues of the man who knows how to handle a crowd. Herbert Swope ungrudgingly admitted that it happened that by now the old man was wanting recognition and would stop and block the aisle of a crowded restaurant.

I thought back to the time when Howard got Northcliffe to get Lloyd George to tell him exclusively Britain's "war aims", and the prime minister, with a vulgarly shocking to English decorum, said the war would have to go to a knockout. Now I realize that this was propaganda. Northcliffe planted this defile in the American press with the maximum of dramatic force and popular appeal. Hence it echoed in France and Germany with appropriate results. Nevertheless, old David had been hard on Lloyd now anyone could pick his side.

I find it tedious going and I am suspicious every word of the way, but I have made some progress in Robert Sherwood's "Roosevelt and Hopkins". I remind myself that this man was a devotee so passionate that truth to him would be vile abuse of a holy man and this seems true as well of Frances Perkins' "The Roosevelt I Knew" and of Henry Morgenthau's magazine series that was mysteriously withheld from boards. I was pleased therefore to have clipped the magazine pages because if the day ever comes when the story of our betrayal is fully told these naive memories of a complex man may be a key to mysteries.

I put by a story of General Patton, hoping that his widow and her friends will tell the story that we know has been withheld, perhaps only until Eisenhower makes his bid for the presidency. George Morgenthau's "Pearl Harbor, the Story of the Secret War" is so true and so feeble the response has been that I read parts of it over again and despair. About the same may be said of Beard's great challenge on the coming of the war. Don't get confused, walk away and come back to "A Trial on Trial", a legal analysis of the horrible mass sedition case, but I get the purport of it. There are the many scullery books of White House flunkies revealing intimacies of a court as frantic and squalid as the Russian in the days of Rasputin. Six feet of books to be read. I conquer one foot and 18 inches has been added to the end. I am hurrying, but I can't keep up. A little more time, marshal. After a I helped to make you famous.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By JOHN CHANDLER (For Hugh Fullerton, Jr.)

New York, June 16 —(AP)— Pull up a saddle, and let's take a little ride with wily Eddie Arcaro, the jockey man who has ridden great horses as well as prime glue factory prospects.

Often at Jamaica racetrack and elsewhere the $2 bettor who has just watched Arcaro lose aboard a favorite will give with the Bronx cheer:

"Boo, banana nose, boo."

Some boo, and they're not kidding. Others might join in with a laugh, just for vocal exercise. But most of them have to agree the guy is one of the greatest riders in the history of the American turf.

Now at the ripe age of 34 the little Italian boogie who drives a shiny Cadillac is still going strong. Perhaps he'll quit riding one day, and start training horses. However, he's still the most sought after jockey in the country. He's a free lancer, and picks his mounts. As long as his annual income hits six figures, why not get it while he can? Maybe he couldn't train a horse worth a lick.

Six figures. That's $100,000 or so per year. When Joe DiMaggio or Ted Williams sign a contract for $100,000 a season, that headlines scream.

In the spring of 1948 Eddie Arcaro agreed to ride Citation for Calumet farm. It was like giving somebody the keys to the bank. But Ben Jones, the Calumet trainer, knew whom he wanted on the horse. The announcement didn't cause much of a sports page splash.

Citation won 5 races, lost one under Arcaro that year. The horse earned $644,995 in those races. So Arcaro collected his usual 10 per cent of the stake money, or more than $64,000, with just one horse. That doesn't include the fees from riding several hundred others.

In 1949 Arcaro rode horses that earned $1,183,309. Of these races, about $700,000 came from stakes. Arcaro had 870 mounts, with 194 winners. Owners pay riders a minimum of $25 to ride, with at least $50 if they win. In many cases it is 10 per cent, whether it's a stake or not. So Arcaro's absolute minimum last season was $43,500 if he got only $50 for each winner, and $25 for the others.

Few realize that other top riders like Steve Brooks, Ted Atkinson, Johnny Longden and Grodon Gilsom come close to six-figure incomes each year.

They must be athletes, just as much as a football player, fighter or baseball player. It requires muscles and nerve as well as brains to handle about half a ton of surging horseflesh. Most riders have had spills, some have been killed. They take a chance every time they get on a horse.

Arcaro takes his boogie calmly, doesn't try to give it back to the fans. Naturally at times he is burned by the remarks. He manages to keep that poke face nevertheless.

"It's easy to ride a horse from the ground and stand," he once remarked.

The fact that Arcaro is riding a horse often makes him the favorite although the horse isn't that good.

He has won four Kentucky derbies, more than any other rider. Eddie has on three Prekness stakes, four Belmonts. Name a great race and look in the record book. Somewhere, some year you'll find the name Arcaro listed as the rider on the winner. He's done it in the Flamingo and Widener in Florida, the Santa Anita handicap, Brooklyn, The Dwyer, American derby, Belmont Futurity — and not once but several times in some cases. Other stakes too numerous to mention have the Arcaro name on the winner.

The difference between good and bad jockeys, Arcaro once said, is judgment.

"You sit on a horse, and either you just know what to do, when to do it and how, or you don't. That's all there is to it."

Until 1948 he was contract rider for Greentree stable. That meant a lot of getting up with the chickens to exercise horses. Not now. He has reached that happy state where he can be his own boss.

"Once you sleep in silk pajamas you don't like to get up in the morning."

Arkansas' Kell Leading Batters

By JACK HAND

Associated Press Sports Writer

George Kell of Detroit seems determined to erase the "freak hitter" smudge from his American league batting crown.

They said it was a mistake when the Tiger third baseman nosed out Ted Williams of Boston for the title on the final day of the '49 season. Brother, it's no mistake this year.

Day after day Kell keeps shoving his average a little higher. Now it's .386, best in the majors. Williams, in moving up gradually after a serious slump, is hitting .326.

Old timers are reminded of Ty Cobb by the way Kell holds his bat with his hands several inches apart. For years it's been stylish to swing from the end of the bat, aiming for the stands. Kell finds he can spray his shots to all fields. And he still gets his three or four homers a season. Nobody is calling him a "freak hitter" this spring.

Kell slashed two singles and a double in three trips against Philadelphia yesterday as the Tigers thumped the A's, 7-3. The victory, coupled with a New York defeat, gave Detroit a 1-2 game lead in the American lead race.

Freddy Hutchinson survived a shaky start and finish to rack up his seventh victory for the onrushing Tigers who have swept 17 of their last 21 starts.

Maybe Chicago's Billy Pierce finally "arrived" with his 5-0 no-hitter against the New York Yankees yesterday, the best pitched game of the season and his first big league shutout.

When the Tigers, desperate for a catcher, made a deal with Chicago for Aaron Robinson after the 1943 season, Pierce went to the White Sox. He had a dull 7-15 record last year and was 3-5 for this season until yesterday.

Only a single by Billy Johnson, leading off the fifth inning, robbed Pierce of a no-hitter in a game interrupted three times by rain. It was the third straight for the White Sox over the Yanks who continue to make all pitchers look good.

At Cleveland Bobby Lemon hit a home run in the tribe's 3-1 victory over Boston. Lemon's homer

'Three Came Home' Is True Story Featuring Claudette Colbert

Dramatic Film Opens Sunday at the Saenger

Claudette Colbert in "Three Came Home" has been announced by the Saenger Theatre as its next attraction. It opens Sunday. Miss Colbert, whose triumphs in comedy and romantic dramas are more familiar, essays one of her infrequent straight dramatic parts in "Three Came Home."

The role is that of Agnes Newell, writer, who with her family is captured by the Japanese invading North Borneo during the early days of the Pacific War. Interned in a Jap prison camp throughout the war, Mrs. Keith undergoes brutality and savagery that test a woman's mettle and try her courage. There is a happy ending in family reunion to Mrs. Keith's true, brave story.

With the long-celebrated star are to be seen a number of important players. Patric Knowles has the male lead. Also featured are two unusual players, a new face in comedienne-singer Florence Desmond, who enters films in quite a different mood, and an old face in silent screen star Sessie Hayawa, who returns to the American screen after passing the war years in Europe to play a Japanese prison camp director. Through her will be new to the present generation, to its parents he is a legend of international renown.

Absolute authenticity was the watchword in Twentieth Century-Fox's preparation of "Three Came Home." Staged under the personal supervision of production head Darryl F. Zanuck, Mrs. Keith's autobiographical novel dramatized only the true events she endured under the Japs, tells of the most intimate adventures and personal experiences of war, as seen through the eyes of a woman. Freak Collision Leaves Three Persons Dead

Farmington Mo., June 15 (AP)—A freak collision involving four cars killed three members of one family and seriously injured three others yesterday.

A new club coupe was hurled free from a tow car that collided with the rear of another automobile. The highway patrol said the driverless car then swung out into the wrong lane and that the machine in which the victims were riding plowed into it from the opposite direction.

Killed were Mrs. Lyman Brooks and two children, James Brooks, 8, and Phyllis, 9. Injured were Brooks and two other children, Katherine, 11, and Bonnie Jo, 3.

The three older children were said to be of a previous marriage, with their mother now living in Tulsa, Okla. Brooks, 37, is a truck driver of New Franklin in central Missouri.

The smashup occurred on U. S. High 61 and 87 five miles south of Farmington. The Brooks car broke into flames that were quickly put out.

The highway patrol said the other cars were driven by Lloyd T. Archer, automobile dealer of Ravenden, Ark., and John A. Wagner of St. Louis.

Archer suffered minor injuries, but Wagner was not hurt. A passenger in Wagner's car, Mrs. Clarence Mulvaney of St. Louis, suffered a shoulder injury.

Geese are known to live as long as 30 years.

is every off-the-beaten-path approach for war and should throw new light on the whole subject.

The screenplay made of Mrs. Keith's book was written by Nunnally Johnson, who also served Twentieth Century-Fox as producer of "Three Came Home." One of Hollywood's foremost directors, the man who made "Johnny Belinda" and "Road House," Jean Negulesco, directed "Three Came Home."

Allen-Porter Vows exchanged in Gordon
The Beech Street Baptist church, Gordon, was the scene of a beautiful candlelight wedding Friday afternoon, June 2, when Miss Dorothy Mae Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Allen, became the bride of Warren A. Porter, son of Mrs. Watson Porter and the late Mr. Porter of Prescott. Rev. Earl Humble, pastor of the First Baptist church, Prescott, officiated. A profusion of greenery was used throughout the church. Smilax was entwined around the chancel rail and framed the windows where lighted tapers were placed. Tall gold and white vases, holding white gladioli, carnations and stock, and gold and white candles, with white tapers decorated the altar.

Little Misses Julia and Sarah Freeman, wearing dainty pastel green organza frocks and halos of pink carnations lighted the tapers. Nuptial music was furnished by Mrs. Glenn Ross, organist, and Mack Short of Arkadelphia, who sang "Because" and "I Love You Truly."

The bride, who entered with her father, wore a ballerina length dress of exquisite white lace over taffeta with fitted bodice, off the shoulder neckline and full scalloped skirt. Her millets were of matching lace and she wore as her only ornament a strand of pearls. Her veil of illusion fell from a coronet of stephanotis and she carried a white satin Bible topped with a mauve orchid cascaded with white satin and stephanotis.

Miss Dorothy Wortham, the bride's only attendant, wore a ballerina dress of yellow lace over taffeta, with fitted bodice and full skirt. Her large picture hat, with touches of tiny blue flowers underneath the brim, and her elbow length millets were of matching lace. She carried a colonial bouquet of blue carnations with rainbow ribbon.

Watson G. Porter of Dallas, Tex., served his brother as best man. Ushers were Adam Guthrie, Curtis Ward and Richard Bright of Prescott and Buddy Allen of Gordon.

Following the wedding, a reception was held in the home of the bride's parents, which had been beautifully decorated with greenery. The mantel had an arrangement of white gladioli, stock and carnations. Miss Nancy Freeman had charge of the bride's book. Mrs. Watson Porter of Dallas, Tex., presided at the punch bowl, while Mrs. Everett Salsman of Charleston, Ind., sister of the groom, served the cake.

The table was covered with a lovely cut work cloth and centered with three tiered wedding cake beautifully decorated in all white. Others assisting in the reception were Mesdames Earl Allen, Jr., Elwood Robinson, David Bruden, Charles Dillard, Bruce Freeman and Audrey Moorman.

The couple left by motor for a honeymoon to points in the East, after which they will be at home in El Dorado.

U. S., Russia Arming But Talk Peace

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, June 16 (AP)—The United States and Russia are arming to the teeth. Meanwhile, the leaders of both countries keep pounding away on the idea that all they want is peace.

The U. S. plans to spend $13,000,000,000 or so on its own armed forces next year. The Russians expect to spend even more on theirs about $19,850,000,000.

The Russians must have been pounding harder on the word "peace" for now U. S. Leaders are working busily on the word. This becomes clear when you add a few things together:

Yesterday Paul Hoffman, head of the Marshall plan for Europe, told congress that Moscow's so-called "peace" offensive has his officials worried.

The Russians, Hoffman said, are hammering on the word "every hour on the hour." And he said: "The thing that concerns us most is Moscow's peace drive. The real aim is the neutrality of Europe."

He meant that the Russian leaders, by picturing themselves as peace-loving and the U. S. leaders as warmongers, hoped to win Europe away from U. S. leadership.

2. Last May, when Secretary of State Acheson met in Europe with the foreign ministers of our allies in the Atlantic pact, he was told the U. S. leaders were letting the Russians run with the ball and not stressing "peace" enough when they spoke on foreign affairs.

Then look at what followed: May 31—right after his return from Europe, Acheson addressed both houses of congress. He used the word peace 15 times. He said the purpose of the meeting in Europe was "the same as the constant purpose of our foreign policy: The preservation of peace."

June 1... Two days later President Truman told a news conference the world is closer to peace now than at any time in the past five years. He didn't say why he thought so.

But his statement astonished the newsmen because only earlier that same day Mr. Truman sent a message to congress, asking $1,200,000,000 to arm foreign countries.

In his message he told congress the arms were needed as "part of our common effort to increase the strength of the free world in the interest of peace" although, he said, "the threat of aggression casts its shadow upon every quarter of the globe." He used the word peace, though, 12 times.

June 3... Acheson went before congress to urge it to approve the $1,200,000,000 for arms for Europe. This time he used "peace" only three times, but on—

Tarzan Film Is Feature at Rialto

A husky, good-looking lad with a socialite background and a distinguished war record that he is too modest to talk about, that's Lex Barker, currently playing the role of "Tarzan" for the second time in Edgar Rice Burroughs' "Tarzan and the Slave Girl" sharing stellar honors with Vanessa Brown and Robert Alda.

Educated at Phillips-Exeter and Purinton, Barker got the action bug during his school days, and gave up his engineering courses to join a summer stock company. He appeared in a couple of Broadway shows, but at the urging of his family dropped theatricals to prepare himself to join his father in business.

A year before Pearl Harbor he went into the Army as a buck private, came out a major, and decided to take up acting again. He came to Hollywood, played a few small roles, and then got the part of Loretta Young's twofisted brother in "The Farmer's Daughter" at RKO Radio a part that got him a term contract with the studio.

Producer Sol Lesser, looking in a replacement to take over Johnny Weissmuller's spot in the "Tarzan" series for RKO Radio distribution, signed him to play Edgar Rice Burroughs famous apeman in Tarzans Magic Fountain.

Six feet four inches tall and weighing an even 200 pounds, Barker is ideal in physique and agility for the strenuous role. He is an expert skier and swimmer, a crack tennis player, and was a track and gridiron star in his school days. He is the tenth actor to portray the Tarzan role in the 30-odd years he series has been on the screen.

congress again. This time he said he didn't like the term "cold war." He suggested it be dropped in discussions of international affairs and called "cold war" an "unfortunate phrase."

It was used originally, he said, to describe what the Russians were doing but so much talk developed in this country that the meaning was turned around and appeared to describe what the U. S. was doing. "We are not engaged in war but in peace," Acheson said.

June 9—Mr. Truman used the word "peace" 17 times in talking to the graduates of the University of Missouri at Columbia, Mo. He emphasized our "peace program" which, he said, was aimed at keeping peace and stopping war.

June 10—This time Mr. Truman used "peace" 28 times in a talk at St. Louis, Mo. He accused the Russians of menacing the world and preparing for war. He said we have a long road ahead to preserve peace. He said "we cannot be complacent because the

U. S. Vice Reports Are Studied

Washington, June 15 (AP)—Senate crime investigators studied reports today that counterfeiting and illegal narcotics traffic both are on the upswing in the United States.

In testimony released yesterday, federal officials reported that money is being turned out faster than at any time in the past 10 years, while the drug trade is booming, especially in New York, York, Chicago and San Francisco.

The testimony came from Secret Service Chief U. E. Baughman and Commissioner H. J. Anslinger of the U. S. bureau of narcotics, and was made public by the senate appropriations committee. They asked more money for their operations.

Baughman said the counterfeiters are specializing in $10 and $20 bills, and that his men are seizing spurious money at the rate of $100,000 a month. More than $550,000 worth was seized in the first five months of this year.

"More and more criminals are turning to counterfeiting," he said, adding that most of them are World War II black marketeers who turned out false OPA stamps. He said their operations are centered mostly in Chicago and New York.

A special senate crime investigating committee headed by Senator Kefauver (D-Tenn.) already has its agents digging into the activities of underworld crime rings dealing in narcotics, counterfeiting, gambling and other rackets. The Kefauver committee is convinced, from investigations thus far, that there is a link between the big criminal gangs. The group is seeking to disclose the interlocking operations.

Baughman testified that the Chi-dangers we confront are many and serious. Above all I wish to emphasize that the objective of our efforts is peace, not conflict."

June 13... Acheson set a new total for himself in the use of "peace." He employed the word 19 times in a talk at Dallas, Tex., and said war is not inevitable.
